

4. How long will it take before my new medication starts to take effect?

Most disease-modifying medications (DMARDs) take 8-12 weeks to be effective, particularly if they require a gradual dose increase. Some people do notice an improvement earlier than this.

You may require an increase in the dose of your medication or need an additional disease-modifying drug added in order to settle your joints.

www.enherts-tr.nhs.uk

