The pancreaticobiliary cancer clinical nurse specialist (CNS)

The CNS is a trained nurse specialising in the area of pancreaticobiliary cancers and the associated issues. Some CNSs are also known as Macmillan nurses and are closely associated with the national organisation, Macmillan Cancer Support. This organisation is devoted to helping patients and their families cope with the diagnosis, treatment and effects of cancer.

In East and North Hertfordshire Teaching NHS Trust, the role of the CNS also includes support for patients and their family when a cancer is suspected but not confirmed. Your CNS is also known as your key worker and works alongside the multidisciplinary team.

What is a multidisciplinary team?

A multidisciplinary team (MDT) is a specialist team of health professionals who decide your diagnosis, care and treatment. The consultant looking after you will take responsibility for your care. The team meet weekly to review and discuss a suspected or diagnosed cancer. Your treatment plan will be discussed in the multidisciplinary meeting.

How can the pancreaticobiliary CNS help me?

The CNS is an experienced nurse and understand the fears and anxieties that patients and their families have when a suspicion of, or a diagnosis of cancer has been made. They work closely with you from diagnosis and throughout your cancer journey. They are here to support you and your family by:

- answering your questions.
- advising and supporting you on emotional, physical, financial, social and spiritual concerns.
- helping you fully explore your treatment choices.
- talking through with you any worries concerning your quality of life before and after treatment.

- supporting you on completion of treatment regarding ongoing issues.
- liaising and introducing you to other members of the care team who could support and advise you, e.g. dietician, social worker, district nurse, consultant etc.

Will the hospital CNS visit me at home?

No. They work very closely with the community Macmillan nurses and/or district nurses who work in your local area. If necessary, with your consent, they will refer you to their care. This means that all your needs will be met by the team closest to your home.

Is information about me kept confidential?

Yes. All information regarding your tests, diagnosis and treatment plan will be treated in a confidential manner. Only members of the healthcare team involved in your care will have access to information about your diagnosis and treatment. Please see our privacy notice for how we protect patient information:
